HUGHES SAYS COOLIDGE IS IN FAVOR OF NEW ARMS PARLEY

Secretary Tells London Pilgrims Of American Attitude

SEES WAR CURE

World Leaders Must Get Together In Friendly Spirit, He Says

BY UNITED PRESS

London, July 22.—The American Secretary of State, Mr. Hughes, speaking before the Pilgrim Society, whose guest he was last night, said that world peace could be brought about if the responsible leaders of the leading nations would work together in the spirit that animated the Washington conference. He expressed the hope that another such conference, imbued with the same unselfish spirit, could be held in the near future.

"I speak for President Coolidge and the American people," he said, "when I say to you that the President of the United States favors another such conference as soon as the time is opportune. It is by such conferences as this, in which the world's leaders of public opinion are brought together in a spirit of unselfishness and good will, that will forever free the world from the great menace of competitive armament.

"As for the United States, I can assure you that our country will continue its policy as a non-aggressive power, devoted always to the interests of peace, desirous only of promoting friendships between nations."

RIVER JUNKMEN THREATEN DEATH TO STEAMER MEN

Guild Passes Resolution Putting Ban On Rival Carriers

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 23.—A Japanese telegram from Ichang quotes a foreign informant as saying that the Wanhsien Junkmen's Guild has passed a resolution that henceforth the transportation by water of salt, copper, sugar and paper exports and of cotton and two other articles of import must be carried by junks.

The resolution adds that compradores of steamers acting contrary to the resolution would render themselves and their families liable to death.

Shopkeepers Fined, For Manufacturing Low Grade Ice Cream

For manufacturing and selling ice cream found by the Health Department to be unfit for human consumption, four Chinese shopkeepers were fined $25 each by Assessor Martin and Magistrate Zau of the Mixed Court yesterday.

The shops involved are located at 199 Foochow Road, 448 Nanking Road, 192 Nanking Road and 190 Chekiang Road, samples from the output of which establishments were taken by the Health Department several days ago. The case was prosecuted by Health Inspector Howard, who stated that the bacteriologist's report showed the cream unfit for eating, it being full of bacteria. He stated that there were 61 shops in the Settlement licensed for the manufacture of ice cream.

One of the defendants submitted a statement which puzzled everybody in the court room. He made one kind of ice cream for "vegetarians," he said, and another kind for "general consumption."

POLICE OFFICIAL HITS AT FOREIGN ARMS SMUGGLING

Comments On Contraband In Ships; Also On Inadequate Punishments

Some highly pertinent comment on the current epidemic of arms smuggling, particularly with application to foreign steamship lines, which is responsible for a large proportion of the armed robberies here, is made by Acting Commissioner of Police Major Hilton Johnson in a report contained in today's Municipal Gazette.

The comment is lent special point by the fact hat, it is stated, another large batch of arms was discovered by the Customs yesterday on board the French Mail steamer Angkor.

Major Hilton Johnson's report states:

"In regard to the question of armed robbery generally the following remarks may not be out of place. An armed robber is the combination of a lawless man and a pistol. Lawless men are turned out in large quantities at the public expense as so-called soldiers all over the country. Disbanded in this neighborhood (as some thousands recently have been) they naturally drift to Shanghai. No authority can prevent them from doing so. Pistols reach Shanghai, also in large quantities, in foreign ships from foreign countries. Under the complex scheme of local administration these weapons can be landed and distributed without much difficulty. Considerable seizures of arms and ammunition are often made on board ships in harbor by the Customs Authorities. Smaller captures are not infrequently made in the Settlement by the Municipal Police. But as the Municipal Police do not function either on the river or on any of the private wharves they can actually themselves do very little to stop the entry of weapons into the Settlement from the direction whence most of them come.

"The Municipal Police, therefore, have to accept the existence of armed desperadoes in the immediate vicinity of their jurisdiction as a ready-made and unpreventable condition of affairs: that is, they are in the unsatisfactory position of having to deal with the advanced stages of a malady which ought to be checked at its source. The measures used include serches, raids, round-ups, domiciliary visits and so on.

"Pursued unremittingly, as they are, these activities are bound to bring the Police into conflict with those against whom they specially operate. When this happens firearms are used on both sides and members of the public are quite likely to get shot. This is a risk inseparable from the presence of armed criminals—which in itself, be it noted, is dependent chiefly upon the influx of weapons smuggled by foreigners in foreign ships from foreign countries.

INSIGNIFICANT PENALTIES

"Evidence shows the illicit arms traffic in Shanghai to be a thriving business conducted on a large scale. That so many foreigners engage in it is chiefly owing, no doubt, to the insignificant penalties involved in case of detection. In one Consular Court the maximum penalty is three months' imprisonment. In another it appears to be 29 days. In another an arms runner recently caught in the act of selling arms to a Chinese was let off scot free on

Russian Refugee Children In Shanghai Are Present Problem To Relief Heads

Meeting At Home Of Mrs. S. W. Wolfe, Decides To Ask Police To Delegate Russian Constables To Inquire Into Individual Cases; School Or Kindergarten Suggested

The Russian refugee problem, though attacked continually by earnest people who are eager to solve it, remains as an almost insurmountable obstacle for Shanghai problem-solvers. Just as soon as one phase of the problem has been attacked and straightened out, another kink appears somewhere else.

Just now, the matter of the little Russian children who are disguising begging activities in the streets with the thin veneer of attempts to sell oddments from their trays, is causing a considerable flutter among serious-minded Shanghai. The result of the recent agitation against the misery of these little ones was a meeting called by Mr. S. W. Wolfe, Chairman of the Russian Refugee Relief Advisory Committee, at his home in Rue Lafayette.

Among those present at the meeting besides Mr. Wolfe were Rev. G. W. Sheppard, secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society; Madame L. Vouich, who is known for her work in connection with Madame Dietrichs' Orphanage, and, more recently, with the school and dispensary maintained by the Russian Orthodox Confraternity; and Dr. Kasakoff, chairman of the latter organisation.

One of the first steps to be taken, the meeting decided, was to request the cooperation and assistance of the police in delegating Russian constables to inquire into the actual cases of children in the streets, and learn if these children can be removed from the streets and sent to a school or kindergarten. In this connection, it was suggested that possibly the Council could assist the work of the committee by refusing to issue hawkers' licenses to these children on the grounds of their extreme youth, for many of the children noticed about selling articles are as young as 4 and 6.

Madame Vouich and Dr. Kasakoff were questioned as to the facilities of the school their confraternity is maintaining at 721 Avenue Foch. They replied that there were at present about 25 children in this school, living there, and that they had room for 6 or 7 more. They expressed their willingness to enlarge the school, to take care of any children sent to them but stated that if this were done more funds would be necessary.

This school and dispensary cost $200 a month to operate with 25 to 28 children living there. The Confraternity has but $300 left in its treasury. The monthly allotment of $200 is the absolute maximum that the various Russian Societies and Russian people who have some independent means of their own and who are supporting the school can give.

Mr. Wolfe raised the question which he said had been put to him many times, as to whether the Russian people of means in Shanghai were doing everything they could to help their unfortunate compatriots. Both Madame Vouich and Dr. Kasakoff declared that, to the best of their knowledge, every Russian in Shanghai who could give was giving to the limit his purse would stand to help his fellow-countrymen.

Following the meeting, a visit was paid to the school. The building, though sparsely furnished and lacking in most of the usual appointments, was clean and sanitary, and the children, too, were clean and fairly happy looking. In the school are three teachers, one of whom is the director. He gets no salary, but simply his bare living, sharing the same inadequate fare that the children have; that is, tea and bread in the morning, soup and bread at tiffin; tea at 5 and potatoes or rice in the evening. The dispensary which is mainatined at 235 Avenue Foch cares for as many as 80 patients every day. The only expenses there are for medicines, bandages, the necessary maintenance expenses, etc., as the 4 Russian doctors in attendance give their time free. Most of the patients are suffering from preventable diseases due entirely to the miserable conditions in which they find themselves—dysentery, malaria, cholera, malnutrition, anaemia, tuberculosis, skin diseases, etc.

Those who can give anything to either the school or the hospital will be performing a really worthwhile charity. It is particularly requested that old clothes, especially for small boys, be sent by those who can do so either to Madame Vouich, 10 Route Voyron, or to the Russian Orthodox Confraternity, 761 Avenue Foch. If any persons have cotton thread or knitting yarn that they have no use for, the lady teacher at the school will be most glad to have it, for now that lessons in the school are given only in the morning, she wants to teach the girls lace making and knitting so that they can turn their efforts toward productive work that may bring in some money to the school.

WHISKY-SODA AND OPIUM PIPE ON PAR, CONTENTION

Mixed Court, However, Differs With Attorney; Imposes Fines

"The smoking of opium is an offense, but it is like drinking whisky and soda, which is not an offense in most countries," submitted Attorney Zia in the course of an opium case at the Mixed Court yesterday.

The Court, Assessor Martin and Magistrate Zau, differed in opinion on the point.

"The smoking of opium and the drinking of whisky and soda are matters on an entirely different footing," remarked the Assessor, and the two defendants, charged with aiding and abetting in the preparation of opium for smoking at 59 Ningpo Road, were fined $100 each.

Inspector Hermitage testified that when he visited the place on July 14 he found three large pots of opium boiling, the first accused being in charge. The latter informed him that he had been brought over from Frenchtown to prepare 140 ounces of the stuff for the personal use of the second accused, and that he had prepared an equal amount on the previous day. The police officer submitted that the quantity was too large for one man's personal use.

After the testimony had been given, Mr. Zia made the comment aforementioned and asked that the opium be returned to its owner. Refusing the application, the Assessor gave the reply stated.

Charge Shopman With Imitating Foreign Trademark

Charged with marketing an inferior brand of wool carrying labels in close imitation of a reliable brand, a Chinese shopkeeper named Lie Koh-ping appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday on complaint of Messrs. Paton and Baldwin, Ltd.

It is alleged that the defendant sold inferior wool bearing a label almost identical with the "Beehive" brand labels of the complainants, which was calculated to deceive customers and injure the business credit of the complainants.

The case was remanded for a special hearing by Assessor Martin and Magistrate Zau, defendant to furnish bail in the sum of $500.

Sir Roderick Jones, Back From World Tour, Talks To Journalists

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 22.—Sir Roderick Jones, Chairman of Reuters, was entertained to luncheon today by the Institute of Journalists on the occasion of the conclusion of his world tour. He dealt informally with the newspaper and journalistic position in the Far East and India and paid a tribute to the good tone and remarkable technical efficiency of the Japanese press and the English newspapers in the Far East and India. Sir Roderick emphasised the growing desire of the best Chinese journalists and the vernacular press in India to attain the highest English standard of journalism and predicted an enormous development of journalism in China in the next 20 years.

3000 Civilians Dead Or Injured In The Brazilian Revolt

(Reuter's American Service)

Washington, July 22.—Three thousand civilians are reported to have been killed or injured in the fighting at Sao Paulo between the Federals and the revolutionists. There have been no American casualties. The heaviest fighting up to the present took place on the night of July 20, but the situation has not materially changed. The rebels' numbers are estimated at at least 10,000 men.

Geddes Talks On Rubber Restriction

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 23.—Sir Eric Geddes, in the course of a speech to a representative gathering of all branches of the rubber industry at a dinner in connection with the Empire Exhibition last night, dwelt on the great increase in the use of rubber. He pointed out that consumption in the United States was over six pounds per head and that in the United Kingdom one pound per head.

America was the greatest customer of the plantation owner, and therefore the grower must serve this customer faithfully and well and must cooperate with him in promoting the development of the industry. Different views were held regarding rubber restriction in different parts of the world, but the maintenance of a steady supply was essential to the industry as a whole

SERIOUS DIFFICULTIES HAVE ARISEN AT ALLIED CONFERENCE IN LONDON DUE TO BANKERS' STAND

French Press Declares Financiers, Chiefly American, Are Not Satisfied With Guarantees Proposed For £40,000,000 Loan To Germany; Dawes Plan To Fail If Herriot Yields, Says Paris "Matin," Otherwise Versailles Treaty Will Have To Be Revised

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 23.—In anticipation of a crisis in the Inter-Allied Conference an unusual crowd of sightseers assembled at Downing Street today.

The principal Allied delegates were closeted with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and Mr. J. H. Thomas in the Cabinet room this morning.

The sub-committee examining the question of restoration of German economic unity has not completed its labors as expected, and the holding of the plenary conference will depend on the result of its labors.

Reuter's correspondent at Paris states that uneasiness at possible Conference developments is expressed by all the newspapers today. It is feared that M. Herriot, while determined not to yield France's right to isolated action in the event of German default, may accept a compromise which would simply gild a bitter pill.

The Petit Parisien suggests that M. Herriot should not hesitate to sacrifice the £40,000,000 loan rather than permit encroachment of the Treaty and the sovereignty of France.

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 22.—Mr. Ramsay MacDonald yesterday and today conferred at length with the chief delegates to the London Conference. Subsequently the Cabinet held its weekly meeting, which was advanced by a day in view of the probability of the plenary session of the Conference opening tomorrow.

It was noticeable today that M. Herriot is looking pale and tired and apparently suffering from strain.

The comments of French newspapers, based on long despatches from their correspondents, make it clear, according to Reuter's Paris correspondent, that serious difficulties have arisen. The difficulties are chiefly due to the attitude of the bankers, notably the Americans, towards the protocol drafted by the first committee on July 19, which, they consider, does not give sufficient security to the investors in the proposed loan of £40,000,000 to Germany. Even M. Herriot's organ, the Ere Nouvelle, joins in the chorus of newspapers, declaring that the bankers are influenced by politicians hostile to the Reparations Commission and aiming at preventing France retaining her freedom of action in the event of German default.

The Matin describes the difficulty as serious and almost tragic. It says that, if M. Herriot refuses the bankers the guarantees they require, the Dawes plan will fall to the ground and, if he agrees, it will ultimately mean revision of the Treaty of Versailles.

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 22.—Whatever happens, a full meeting of the Allied Conference tomorrow is almost certain, at which the reports of the three committees appointed last week will be considered.

The financial experts had two long meetings with the representatives of the bankers today regarding the Allies' views about security for the £40,000,000 loan. It is expected that the views of the bankers will be submitted to tomorrow's Conference. The subcommittee of the second committee expects to finish the examination of the question of restoration of German economic unity tonight in readiness for the consideration of the Conference tomorrow.

Washington, July 22.—The White House regards Mr. Hughes's declaration at the Pilgrims' dinner in London that American assistance in the economic rehabilitation of Europe might be counted on, as a general statement of American international policy under the Coolidge Administration. Mr. Hughes and President Coolidge had discussed the speech beforehand.

Paris, July 22.—The British and American bankers yesterday again called in question the agreement reached by the experts with regard to the issue of the 800 million marks loan. They claimed new

FAMINE RELIEF BODY REPORTS ON FLOOD DAMAGE

Situation In Various Affected Areas Described In Detail

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, July 20.—The head office of the China International Famine Relief Commission, which is carrying out an investigation to determine the severity and extent of flood distress, is in receipt of the following information:

METROPOLITAN AREA

From personal investigation conducted by Mr. Liu Hsi-lien, member of the Metropolitan Committee of the Commission, the Yungtingho south dyke has suffered a third break between the two already reported, and the water is flowing through all three breaks. There are 1,200 refugees near the river. No reports are yet available of victims on the other side of the flood. In Llangshan alone seventy-one villages are floodod.

Reports from various sources, both Chinese and foreign, indicate serious flood to the East of Peking, particularly at Tungchow, Paoti, Shangho and Sanho, due to breaks in the dyke at Peiyunho. The greatest damage was probably in Tungchow where the water reached a height of seven to eight feet on level ground. At Paoti half of the district is under water. The break occurred at Shangho and Sanho Shunyihsien and Wu Tsinghsien are also reported to be flooded.

CHIHLI

In Chihli province outside the Metropolitan Area the worst disaster occurred at Kalgan. Five thousand refugees are reported to be in Kalgan city alone. All the grain shops were on low-lying ground and there is undoubtedly a food shortage in the city.

An agent of the Commission reports from Tinghsien that the Shaho overflowed its banks on July 13 at Hsinlihsien, resulting in flooding that hsien. Many villages were destroyed and thousands are homeless in that region.

The Tsumaho, to the south of Peking, is also in flood. The city of Chochow is entirely submerged, and Hsinchenghsien is also affected.

FUKIEN

No fresh news as to conditions has been received from Foochow, but a wire from the Governors of the province has been received in which assistance is asked for.

HUNAN

According to Mr. H. C. Roberts, Secretary of the Hunan Committee of the Commission, who is now in Peking to report on conditions, the worst flood in the memory of natives has occurred in the South, Central and North-west sections of the province, where several of the rivers rose simultaneously. Owing to the steep hills the water rushed on to the low regions with tremendous force, causing great damage to property and loss of life. The suffering is nearly general throughout the province, and the loss of the fall crops will necessitate considerable relief in the fall and the winter.

The Commission is taking steps to co-ordinate the work of all organisations of a national character in order to prevent overlapping and to assure early and adequate relief to sufferers.

assurances, aiming at another authority than the Reparations Commission to decide defaults.

M. Herriot had a conversation with Mr. MacDonald this morning and M. Clemental saw Mr. Hughes.

This afternoon a new conference will take place between the Ministers of Finance and the representatives of the British banks and American financiers. The Temps declares that the impression is more favorable than certain pessimistic comments would have it believed. The objections made by the bankers are not insurmountable. M. Theunis will propose a formula liable to reassure the bankers and eventual lenders.

Mr. Hughes, speaking at a banquet yesterday, said that it was necessary to inspire confidence in the Dawes plan. He added that the nations desired peace and were interested in the execution of the Dawes plan which opened the way to confidence and prosperity.

The Reichstag is sitting today. Vorwaerts, commenting on the attitude of the Nationalists, considers that they will bow to the policy of the Government regarding the London Conference. The Berliner Tageblatt says that it is necessary to declare in good faith that sanctions will be taken only in common and that German territorial integrity will not be touched.

The American press declares itself satisfied with the progress realised by the London Conference and encourages the issue of the proposed loan.

THEN AND NOW, BY 60-YEAR-OLD FLAPPER.

EDNA WALLACE HOPPER

Liquor Adulteration Is Discussed By Health Committee

The matter of adulterated spirits, particularly whisky, was under discussion at a recent meeting of the Health Committee of the Council, according to today's Municipal Gazette.

A report of the Acting Commissioner of Public Health submitted to the Committee noted that the adulteration practised here consisted mainly of the addition of water and pure alcohol and that cheap whiskies were apparently not intrinsically more injurious than other whiskies, but that the low price results in consumption of much larger quantities than would otherwise be the case.

The meeting decided that the Acting Commissioner of Health be asked to arrange in conjunction with the police, within the next few months, to take as many samples from as many establishment as possible in order that information may be obtained from all available sources as to whether spirits are adulterated by the addition of liquids other than pure alcohol and or water. The Committee considered that in future samples should be taken more frequently than hitherto, with a view to considering what, if any, general action should be taken. It was explained that action could be taken only in the case of proved adulteration of a branded whisky, and that the Council would be powerless to take any action against the vendor of a liquid simply described as "whisky."

It was accordingly directed that for the time being samples of well-known branded whiskies only be obtained and in this connection a committeeman suggested that a circular might be issued to all incoming boats, particularly for the benefit of the crews, pointing out the danger of buying whiskies of an unknown make and urging that only branded whiskies be purchased.

American Gobs Enjoy Day's Visit In Soochow

Yesterday a party of American sailors went sightseeing to Soochow with the Navy "Y." It was an especially interesting trip because at this time of the year the fields are of the brightest green and cultivation is going on in the paddy fields. Between the rows of the growing rice plants the water can be seen while the Chinese women stand up to their knees in the water and cultivate the rows of rice plants with the long handled tools. Everywhere the water buffalos, under the little mat sheds, moving around and around in a small circle, wind the gear that raises the water from the irrigation ditch to the thirsty fields. And there are the man operated irrigation machines where the women and children, as well as the men, tread the machines that do the same water lifting work that the water buffalos are doing not far away. The brown sails of hundreds of junks appear above the fields; they float lazily along the canals, but now that there is no grain to be carried, one wonders what they are doing there. Perhaps they are only used for dwelling places in the summer.

Along the railway line, as the party approached Soochow, there was much to enjoy in the landscape. The shores of Tai Hu appeared and disappeared at intervals, and ranges of hills came into view; on many of the summits were pagodas. In the ponds along the way white lotus flowers were coming into bloom. Tiny villages of mat huts were passed and a few larger towns. And then the walls of Soochow were seen and above the parapets the pagodas showed themselves. The wall rises from the canal most and extends for seven miles around the city. The wall, though very old, is intact and shows no signs of repairing. If one walks on the earthwork behind the wall he will discover the old water gates, through which, in bygone years the produce of Soochow, including the beautiful brocaded silks, passed out to the Grand Canal for transportation to the markets of the world. Now the railway takes care of all this and the water gates are only picture things.

The tourist might go far inland and see no city that so greatly typifies old China as does Soochow. The streets and shops are as they were hundreds of years ago. There are no motor cars; one rides on donkey back, or in a palanquin, or in an ancient ricksha. In travels about the city one seldom sees a foreign face.

There is a splendid foreign university and foreign churches and mission schools; hospitals and a thriving Chinese Y.M.C.A. The Chinese are very proud of these institutions. But the Chinese appearance of the city has been very little changed. The old examination cells have gone but the pagodas and temples remain as evidence of past greatness. The Grand Canal is pleasing to the eye. On one side are Soochow streets and on the other old godowns, stone arches and grassy banks lined with junks. Lazily the big thatched roof junks, impelled by the great blade at the stern, or, catching the breeze in the discolored sails, float by to some mysterious destination. The city is interested by many small branch canals, so that in every street there are many high arched bridges. You must get out and follow your richsha, which goes bump, bump, up the stone stairs of the bridge and down the other side. If you are riding a donkey and refuse to dismount, you will have thrills of different kinds before you are landed in the street at the bottom of the bridge. There are many "smells" in Soochow, and that of the salt fish stall is not the nicest. The rag picker's house is next the chow and tea room, and the tinsel stall is next the coffin maker's shop. And every third place is a rice shop. No meat shops were seen but all along the street dried fish, melons and strange native vegetables were sold.

GOBS ATTEND FIRE

The sailors like the excursions to Soochow, many of them going whenever their ship is in port. They like the donkey ride and the opportunity of taking photographs of things really Chinese to send to the folks at home. On nearly every trip there is something different to be seen. Yesterday they saw a fire and the local fire department in action. All along the street to the burning house, boys were blowing calls on police whistles. Firemen with big brass helmets and very little in the way of clothes, were leisurely walking toward the fire. A very small, old fashioned fire pump was being carried to the fire on the shoulders of helmeted Chinese. Near the burning house small boys were carrying buckets of water from the canal and emptying it into the fire pump, from which a small stream was thrown on the fire.

At one of the temples a sweet-toned gong sounded, the priests assembled in the court and solemnly marched to their dining hall. After a period of intoning and prayer they had their simple bowl of rice. They seemed not to mind the curious gaze of the sailor visitors.

At another temple the sailors saw hundreds of gilded idols, all different, and large Buddhas sitting complacently on their thrones, while fierce-visaged giants in armor stand guard near by. In the pools of the temple gardens, large fish rose to the surface and fought for pieces of bread. The monster turtles, that the guide told us were there, could not be induced to show themselves.

A Mandarin garden was visited. One passed through a maze of corridors and came into a beautiful old Chinese rockery. Here, amid the fantastic piles of rocks, the tourists found hidden paths and grottos; and a pool full of great lotus leaves was spanned by a pretty bridge. Then the donkey riders passed through mulberry groves and across fields to Tiger Hill. On arrival and dismounting, the donkeys brayed and the owners loudly demanded 'Cumsha for donkey chow.'

PICNIC LUNCH

Dead Man's Rock, flat and large as a ball room floor and nearly as large, served as the dining table. Beggar children were treated to sandwiches by the sailors and the donkey drivers came in for their share. It was a hot day and glass selling fans did a thriving business. After tiffin the party viewed Tiger Hill Pagoda; supposed to be the oldest and most picturesque pagoda in China. It has a great crack extending from bottom to top and leans a good bit. The sailors thought it best to view it from the side that didn't list. They thought it would be a great sight to see it fall. Near the pagoda were pools filled with pink lotus flowers.

All mounted their donkeys and the ride through the city streets was begun. The leaders made the pace and soon the sailors were racing through the narrow streets. The Chinese pedestrians flattened themselves against the walls of the shops; chair carriers stopped, doorways were filled with amused Chinese and the business of the street was at a standstill until the rough riding tars had passed. The commotion was enough to waken the dragon that sleeps under the stone paved street.

The crowning feature of the day's outing was the climb to the top of Great Pagoda, the largest and highest in all China. From the top there is a grand view for miles over the tile roofed city and far across a lovely valley to a chain of misty mountains.

As the sun was setting over the walls of the city, a tired but happy bunch of sailors boarded their train and said "good-bye" to Soochow.

Sores from Wrist to Elbow
"Completely Healed"

Our portrait is of Mr. John Kidd, of 17, Mill Lane, Kilmarnock, Scotland, who writes: "My right arm became covered with sores from wrist to elbow and was useless for over two years. I tried different ointments and so-called cures, but they never did me any good. Then I tried your 'Clarke's Blood Mixture,' and the sores soon began to heal up and power began to come back to my arm, so I persevered with the Mixture, and after having four bottles am glad to say my arm is completely healed up and I have now the full use of it." In a further letter over a twelvemonth later Mr. Kidd writes: "I have had no return of my complaint; my arm is still as sound as a bell and never troubles me in the least."

Chapei Residents Are In Uproars Against Director Hsu Of Public Works

Over 100 Shops In San Yang Road Suspend Business As Result Of Oppression; General Strike Threatened

A serious clash between the Chapei Public Works department headed by Hsu Jen-tsing, and the shopkeepers of the San Yang Road, Chapei, has taken place as a result of the attempt of Hsu to collect taxes before the completion of public utilities in this district. A strike is now on and threatens to become general if the department continues to ignore the necessities of the residents.

San Yang Road, which is located at the end of West Paoshing Road, used to be a village with little population. Recently new shops were built to vie with the other marketing centers, but the aspiration soon ended in bubbles because the Public Works Department in Chapei failed to provide for the necessary roads, drainage and health facilities.

On Sunday, four men, representing themselves as agents of Hsu Jen-tsing, visited a new cigarette shop at 29 West Paoshing Road and demanded the payment of the summer assessment. The proprietor, Han Tsoling, happened to be out and only a friend, named Chen, an apprentice and a few women were in the house. The collectors were told that the proprietor was not home but would be back later. They were dissatisfied with the explanation, maintained that the shop was resisting payment and took Chen into custody. Later, they again appeared and arrested all the other occupants. There was an uproar in the whole district and all the shops, over 100 in number, put up their shutters.

The strikers are now making various charges against the director, Hsu, alleging negligence of duty and corruption. They maintain that the sanitary conditions in Chapei in general are deplorable although the residents pay enough tax sufficient to beautify the district and make it the equal of the International Settlement to which it is closely situated.

The oppressive measure adopted by Director Hsu is not called for in as much as his department has done nothing to justify the payment. It is public property that the sanitary conditions in Chapei are deplorable: any passenger on the Shanghai railways would know that his train is passing through Chapei by the smell of the place. There is no excuse for this lamentable situation. Unlike Nantao, Chapei is a newly built commercial center, having no city walls to pull down or traditional dark spots to remove. But its condition is worse than that of Nantao: not one good road can be found in the entire area, the strikers contend.

The complainants point to the gross negligence of the streets and the lack of sanitary improvement as the monumental proof of the waste of money by a hand picked official and demand that a thorough investigation be made of his accounts. Chapei has levied heavy taxes, issued big bonds and exacted other tolls from among the residents and not one piece of constructive work has been carried out to the satisfaction of the people.

One of the most interesting features of Hsu's position is its political character. He serves both Nanking and the Shanghai authorities and consequently he must always play one against the other according to the com-

In view of Nanking's control over his department, the Shanghai authorities do not exercise any strict supervisory power over it. Really, Nanking allows him to have his own way out of deference to the local Shanghai authorities. The San Yang Road strike is the climax of the years of "laissez faire" policy and immediate relief is now being sought by the Chapei residents through the proper channels.

TELEPHONE WILL LINK ALL PARTS OF EUROPE SOON

French Language Is Adopted As Medium Of Communication

Paris, June 18.—Greatly improved and extended international telephony is one of the promised developments of the future.

M. Milon, director of the French telephones, says that, though difficult, the plans now being studied will be realised: it is only a question of time. The permanent international consultative committee for long distance telephonic communications is presided over by M. Milon. On this consultative committee are delegates of 19 European countries. The French language has been adopted as a medium for international telephonic exchanges, except where some particular agreement has been made for the employment of a common tongue.

The chief obstacle, says M. Milon, to the development of international telephonic traffic is the amount of time it takes to establish communications. One must, for instance, wait five to six hours to communicate from Paris to London or Berlin, and vice versa. The consultative committee has elaborated projects for the creation of a sufficient number of circuits to permit the use of the telephone from and to any part of Europe.

Such a result cannot be attained unless the circuits are established according to rules thoroughly observed by all countries. It is evident that the interior circuits linked to one another without taking into account the differences of lines and systems can give only uncertain and indistinct communications beyond a distance of 800 or 900 miles.

The efforts of the consultative committee have been: (1) To draw up a logical program of construction of international circuits, either by wires or cables, for long-distance communications. The program, as far as quantity is concerned, answers the needs calculated for a period of five to 10 years; (2) to determine, from a technical point of view, the rules according to which the long-distance international circuits must be constructed and exploited.

The permanent commission has occupied itself with the establishing of questionnaires, to be submitted to the interested offices, in view of preparing this reglementation. Reporters have been assigned to study the different questions.

M. Milon hopes that by next year the commission will be able to transmit to all European offices —including those of Germany and Russia—an ensemble of detailed recommendations, whose application will permit the realisation of a homogeneous organisation of long-distance international circuits.

Water In Place Of Coal

BY HENRY SMITH WILLIAMS

Man could not travel very far along the path to civilisation so long as the sweat of his brow was the chief measure of his working capacity. But he learned how to multiply his powers of accomplishment. He made the ox and horse work for him; he shackled wind and water; and ultimately he dug from the earth coal, and bade it perform labors veritably herculean.

The most recent addition to man's list of co-workers is electricity. It had the great merit of extreme transportability. You had but to furnish it a highway of wire, and it would of its own accord follow the track you had made. But part of the current was frittered away in transit, and beyond a rather limited distance this power carrier could not be sent economically. If electric power plants were erected beside the waterfalls, as at Niagara, their range of operations was limited to an area of not many miles.

Then came the discovery that by using high voltages, the current could be forced along a prescribed channel, with negligible loss. And that discovery gave sure augury of a new industrial era. At once there was new interest in waterfalls, and it became evident that coal was outrivalled.

Consider, for example, the case of the Province of Ontario, Canada, which has neither coal beds nor oil fields, and which therefore, after the exhaustion of the forests, was under necessity of importing every ounce of fuel it used. What chance of industrial advance along manufacturing lines had such a region?

The authorities awakened to realisation of the power going to waste in numerous waterways; and in particular to the harnessable colossus, Niagara. After various preliminaries, a Hydro-Electric Commission was appointed in 1906, and today 380 municipalities receive current for electric light and power, to the aggregate amount of 700,000 horsepower, distributed from twenty-one plants over a network of wire aggregating more than 3,000 miles of high-tension lines alone. Ontario has today the best-developed hydro-electric system on the Western Hemisphere.

Barboy Guilty Of Shanghai Club Cup Theft, Court Finds

Sz Zai-toong, the dapper Chinese barboy who embezzled the Shanghai Amateur Billiard Association cup and the Club Championship trophy from the Shanghai Club Tuesday night was convicted in the Mixed Court yesterday, after admitting the theft. The case was then remanded for one week to allow further investigation.

Detective-Sub-Inspector Hunter of Central station, who recovered the property and effected the arrest, stated that the accused was wearing an outfit of foreign clothing purchased with the proceeds of the theft. When arrested at the New World Tuesday afternoon he was in possession of $8.

The Assessor, replying to an application for payment of the pawn money—$35—held that though the pawnbroker had assisted the police, the assistant who took the cups should have found someone to translate the English inscriptions before accepting the silverware and should have detained the accused. He ordered, however, that the $8 found on the accused should be turned over to the pawnbroker.

On the fourteenth, says the Canton Gazette, a few soldiers were seen accompanying three dead bodies of their comrades which were carried by coolies and entered a coffin seller's shop. The proprietor thought it an ill omen and told the soldiers to leave the corpses in the street. The soldiers, however, did not listen but had the bodies taken into the shop. Three coffins were then taken out and after the bodies had been put into them they left the shop. The proprietor was reported to lose a good deal on this, but he was glad to get rid of them anyway.

An unusually large tiger has just been bagged near Lengkok, in Upper Perak, by Mr. C. Hanny, Assistant on Kota Tampan estate, says the Malay Mail. Setting a trap in the shrub some way behind his bungalow, Mr. Hanny found, that although the bait had not been touched a large tiger had been caught by the claws. Resolving to capture the beast instead of shooting him, Mr. Hanny with much difficulty lassoed the animal and endeavored to get it into a cage. Owing to its precarious hold in the trap, where it was held only by the edge of the claws the operation was a delicate one, and, eventually, just as the animal was being drawn into the cage the heavy shutter was prematurely dropped with the result that the tiger was strangled. It measured 8 feet 11 inches, which is unusually large. A few days previously a cub had been trapped on the estate.

The latest report is that the ex-boy Emperor has been for two days closeted with Mr. Johnston in the latter's house in the Yao Chi-hutung working out a plan to facilitate the former Emperor's departure abroad on which his heart is set. Naturally if he goes, there will be political consequences.

If the funds were devoted to educational purposes outright they will be exhausted before long. To build better roads means to provide reserve funds for educational institutions. Dr. Wang says that both General Feng Yu-hsiang and Marshall Hsiao Yao-nan are in favor of this plan.

Kansu Poppy Cultivation Yields Big Sum To Officials

(Reuter's Pacific Service).

Peking, July 20.—The International Anti-Opium Association has just received the following report from a foreign resident in Kansu:

"Poppy has been grown again this year in this district Changwei, although not so extensively as last year. I was away during the season last year, so do not know the exact amount planted. However, I have it on good authority that the tax was $20 per mou for this county. Last year I personally saw poppy grown in the following districts in Kansu:—Changwei, Tsingyuan, Haiyuan, Hweining, Anting, Tsingning, Chinghsien, Siato, Minchow, Lin T'an Hsien (Taochow), Hochow, Kao Lan (Lanchow), T'ao Sha Hsien (a new hsien near Siato). Poppy was grown in every hsien in Kansu excepting a few where the country is too rugged. Official sanction even to the extent of compulsory planting was the general rule last year. Poppy has been grown in the Province for some years now, but last year it received open encouragement from the officials. The Southern Defence (?-offensive, I should prefer to call him) Commissioner K'an Si Ling in T'sing Chow has had compulsory planting for some years. He has a tax, a fine, and a "Lan To" tax in operation. The first two are for the planting of poppy, while the third is to discourage "Laziness" in non-planting districts. I am not fully informed as to this year's methods in that district, but have reason to believe that the above holds true, unless it has been surpassed by more rigid taxation.

"I have been informed that poppy, although less and of a poorer quality than last year owing to the continued drought, is expected to bring the officials approximately $140,000 in taxes from this district alone. It is to be paid to the tune of $15.00 for each mou under cultivation. The Chengwei Magistrate, Huang Kuo Hua by name, is expected to receive on his own account at least $15,000 from the poppy this year. The harvest has just begun and the new stock is being sold for $.50 an ounce on the streets already.

There is a reputed consumption of $300 worth of opium a day in this city and surrounding district. I have failed to see a home in this city without a lamp. On an average there is a case of opium poisoning every week, principally amongst women and girls. The situation here is, to say the least, most alarming. Men and women, regardless of age or class of society, are habitual users of the poppy. There are also many cases of babies being given the exhaled smoke of the parents in order to quiet them while the mother satisfies her craving.

Outside of the resort to forceful persuasion, there is little chance of inducing the officials to clean up the opium in the Province. Were there but a strong Governor, who had the courage of his convictions effectively to prohibit the planting and sale of poppy, there would be some hope of ridding the Province of this curse, but until there is a Central Government invested with the power to enforce its mandates regarding the abolition of poppy-planting, there is little chance of their being a strong Governor in this or any other of the adjacent provinces."

MALARIA
'Yadil' Antiseptic

THE reports received from various parts of the Empire as to the results obtained in malaria with 'Yadil' Antiseptic deserve the careful attention of all sufferers from that disease. If further experience should support these reports, it means that malaria has at last been conquered. It appears that one or two doses are generally sufficient to check an attack at the onset, and prevent its developing. Sufferers who have been in the habit of going to bed for a week or more during an attack are able to continue their daily work, when they take a dose or two of 'Yadil' at the first warning of a return of the disease. All reports but one are based on the use of liquid 'Yadil'; in that one case, the Pills have proved equally effective.

THE true value of 'Yadil' in the treatment of malaria can only be definitely established by the sufferers themselves, and not by laboratory experiments. I sincerely trust that all those who use 'Yadil' for this disease will kindly report their experience to me, or to the newspapers. It it should turn out that 'Yadil' is successful only in a small proportion of cases, I should not hesitate to make the fact known myself. But if the experience of thousands of sufferers proved definitely that 'Yadil' checks malaria and eventually drives it out of the system, what a glorious day it would be for all the races who live in malarial countries!

WITH 'Yadil' there is not the slightest risk of any bad after-effects. It is absolutely safe. It is entirely of harmless vegetable origin. Its active principle is natural essential oil of garlic, but it never taints the breath or body. It has been used by thousands of medical men throughout the Empire during the last seven years, in malaria, pneumonia, scarlet fever, influenza, cholera, dengue and blackwater fevers, typhus, diarrhoea, dysentery, psilosis or sprue, gangrene, infective wounds, sores, for scalds and burns, bronchitis, coughs, colds, dyspepsia, etc. 'Yadil' destroys within the system all bacterial infection. Once the cause of disease is removed normal health is promptly restored. It is very simple.

THE Yadil Book, 268 pages, cloth bound, gives correct treatments, all based on doctors' reports, for some 200 disorders. Invaluable to keep at hand for ready reference in all emergencies. Sent to any address on receipt of 2/6, or may be ordered through your chemist.

ASK your chemist for a supply of 'Yadil' and a copy of the book. If out of stock he can order some through his London Buyers.

SOUTH AFRICANS AND MIDDLESEX HALTED BY RAIN

Heavy Storm Forces Abandonment Of Play; Other Results

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 22.—The weather was unsettled at the opening of the third day of the match between Middlesex and the South Africans. There were 500 people present. The wicket was soft and easy. The Africans made 139 for 2 wickets (Ward 44 and Susskind 48 not out). There was a heavy storm just after lunch and the match was abandoned.

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 22.—Rain interferred everywhere with cricket.

At Chesterfield, the match between Derbyshire and Northamptonshire was drawn. Derby made 290 and Northants 20 for 3 wickets.

At Weston-super-Mare Somerset beat Sussex by an innings and 162 runs. Sussex made 58 (White 5 wickets for 15) and 101 (White 4 wickets for 29). Somerset made 321 for 7 wickets, declared, (MacBryan 118).

At Birmingham Leicestershire beat Warwickshire on the 1st innings. Leicester made 187 and 81 (Howell 5 wickets for 33). Warwick made 136 and 67 for 2 wicket.

At Leyton Essex beat Hampshire on the 1st innings. Essex made 309 (Freeman 117) and 6 for 2 wickets in the second innings. Hampshire made 226.

At Blackheath in the match for Hubble's benefit Surrey beat Kent on the 1st innings. Surrey made 262 (Sandham 116). Collins took 6 wickets for 28. In their second innings they made 217 for 8 wickets, declared. Kent made 149 (Fenley 5 wickets for 35) and 13 for 1 wicket.

At Liverpool Lancashire beat Worcestershire on the 1st innings. Worcester made 165 and Lancashire 276 for 2 wickets (Watson 112).

In Gloucestershire Gloucester beat Glamorgan by 202 runs. Gloucester made 224 and (?130). Glamorgan made 54 and 98 (Goddard taking 6 wickets for 23 and Dennett 5 for 28).

At Nottingham the match between Notts and Yorkshire was drawn. Notts made 216 and Yorkshire 206 for 9 wickets (Holmes 112).

The match between Ireland and Scotland was drawn. Ireland made 134 and 128 for 7 wickets. Scotland made 178.

Propose Changes In Davis Cup Rule

(Reuter's Service)

London, July 22.—A meeting of the Council of the Lawn Tennis Association in London, at which Japan was represented, today recommended the following alterations in the Davis Cup conditions. The courts should be either grass, turf or a natural or artificial grity material, the choice of ground, court-surface and make of ball should be determined by priority in the draw and a player representing a nation under residentual qualification shall be eligible to represent the nation of his birth after a two years' interval.

The present regulations says that ties must be played on grass unless otherwise agreed.

B TONIGHT!

Two first class bouts are on the program at the Carlton this evening. The main event, which brings Rufe Canion and De la Cruz together in a twelve round argument, should be equal to the best ever offered in the ring here. These boys will have an added incentive tonight, in that the winner is to have the honor of meeting Billy Tingle for the latter's featherweight title. All these scrappers hope eventually to reach the States, and naturally the possession of a title will add much to the chances of getting good engagements on the other side.

In view of the fact that tonight's argument is a title affair the customers can expect a good run for their money. Both boys have been training hard at the old Stadium on Great Western Road, and both are in prime condition.

The semi-final will be in the hands of Syd Keenan and Young Gonzalo. Syd has not been in the ring for some weeks, but he has been training hard and in tonight's affair he promises to take the measure of the Filipino. This ought to be a fine scrap, as good as the main event.

Two excellent preliminary events have been arranged to insure the customers a full evening of fistic entertainment.

Shall We Always Have Good Air

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Are we constantly losing hydrogen which is liberated in the air? It seems to me that this is not recoverable. What will be the ultimate effect on human life? Also, when we have burned up all the coal will we not have heavily charged the atmosphere with carbon dioxide? —Th."

These questions about the effect of human action, and of the operations of nature in our day, as influencing the habitability of the earth in the future, have a great attraction for many minds, and indeed when we consider the earth's history in a broad way, they must take them into account.

We may imagine ourselves in the place of prisoners confined to a room of fixed dimensions, and possessing only limited means of maintaining the supply of respirable air." A question of passionate interest for such prisoners, if they really understand their situation, would be whether the air was losing its vital qualities faster than they were being restored.

And if the answer was that the loss exceeded the gain, the unfortunate prisoners might soon regard themselves as little better off than the victims of the infamous "Black Hole" of Calcutta—unless it appeared that the fatal results would be very slow in arriving, however certain they might be in the end.

Now, this last condition would represent the state of mind of the earth's inhabitants if science should reach the settled conclusion that our atmosphere is undergoing a slow change of a nature inimical to human life. Not barring unexpected cataclysms affecting practically the whole globe (and which we have no reason to anticipate as probable or even possible), any alteration capable of destroying the life-sustaining qualities of the atmosphere would only become really serious after a very long period—many centuries or hundreds of thousands of years.

Yet the problem is made hardly less interesting for the geologist and the biologist by such extension of time, because the effects concerned throw light upon the history of the earth's development and upon its ultimate fate as a planet.

The geologist reads in the rocks of former conditions of climate which could not possibly exist with the earth's atmosphere or its crust in its present state. Among the most striking of these entries in the geological minutes which nature has so scrupulously kept are the records of tropical climates in the Arctic and Antarctic regions, and if we could reach the uncovered poles we might find that the telltale fossils exist even more abundantly there.

There are geologists of great authority who think that the state of affairs indicated by these polar remains of vegetation, including, as we now know, coal beds inside both of the polar circles, had as its primary cause an atmosphere surcharged with carbon or some other element capable of blanketing the planet with imprisoned solar heat. But it was not mah burning coal who carbonised the air.

There are also indications in the geologic record of periods of great cold (the ice ages), and periods of desiccation when whole continents may have dried up and become deserts, the causes being again assigned to atmospheric changes. But the same thing was true then as now, viz.: that none of these great changes occurred suddenly: all were effected by age-long steps. Yet, slow as they were, in many cases they wiped out animal and vegetable life on a gigantic scale.

The proportions of the gases constituting the earth's atmosphere may have undergone recurrent changes. Vegetation flourishes on carbon; animals require much less. The name "Carboniferous Age" was originally given to the period when the coal plants specially flourished. There was later an age when animal life attained special development in the direction of giantism; but that also came to an end, involving the disappearance of the huge beasts that gave it its distinction.

In regard to hydrogen, one thing may perhaps be said, viz.: that it is the only atmospheric gas whose molecular velocity is great enough to enable its molecules to leap from the earth's control when they have risen to the outer parts of the atmospheric blanket. Once lost, we might not get it again. Take it out of the ocean and there would be no more water!

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

The world is not so drear a place
As many people seem to think;
If beer is not sold by the case
Why let our spirits sag or sink?
The places once so ray at night
Are closed, the keys are thrown away,
But when were cuties ever quite
As cunning as they are today?

There's pleasure in the old world yet,
In spite of all the doleful moans;
Spots that in former years were wet
Are dryer now than stacks of bones,
But cheeks are pink that once were pale,
Lips redden under clever touches;
The female still attracts the male
And seldom lets him slip her clutches.

Skirts, once so long and large around,
Have ceased to clutter up the scene,
And much on which our grandmas frowned
We can behold and be serene;
Waists that in by-gone years concealed
Attractive nocks and rounded arms
Now leave much more than half-revealed
Those innocent and sightly charms.

The world is not so dark or drear
As many people think it is;
There may be dearth of liquid cheer
And scarcity of things that fizz,
But boys are boys in aim and act,
Love's not discarded nor forgotten,
And girls are girls—more so, in fact,
Than when we got them wrapped in cotton.

The Thin Slip-on Silk Sweater is Chosen By Smart Women for Golf

Someone commented the other day on the fact that, usual as knickerbockers had become, one never saw them worn on the tennis court. Odd this may seem, since no sport requires greater freedom of motion. If even a champion tennis player can get along with the hindrance of skirts, why can't skirts be endured for walking, gardening, amateur interior decorating and other occupations for which many women nowadays feel that knickers are indispensable?

It was further pointed out on his occasion that while women didn't wear knickers for tennis they did for golf. But as a matter of fact it is now smarter to wear a skirt even on the links. It isn't a matter of propriety—but one of smartness that really determines this question of knickerbockers or skirts with most of us.

There is nothing the least bit striking or original about the golf this occasion that while women

Following the English fashion you may wear a tweed suit with mannish shirt beneath, or you may select the costume chosen by the smart French or Italian woman when she plays golf—namely, a narrow, short skirt with a thin, silk slip-on sweater, always with long, close-setting sleeves. Preferably this thin silk sweater shows neither stripe nor application of any ornament. For cooler days it may be exchanged for a sweater of fine wool. At the neck a handkerchief—not too large—is knotted. There are pull-on gauntlet gloves, wool and silk stockings, heavy oxfords, and a simple hat of the pull-on sort—preferably of lightweight felt.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

BY MARY MARSHALL

WHY ROMAN?

One young woman at the scarf counter called to her associate scarf-seller: "Have you any Romans down there?"

At the ribbon counter you might hear something like this: "I'd like two yards of three-inch Roman."

To the visitor who had not kept the run of popular fashion might come the wonder why there was so much talk of Romans. But to you who have kept track of the mushroom popularity of those combinations of gay colors called Roman stripes, such remarks would be perfectly comprehensive.

But why are they Roman stripes? What did the ancient city on the Tiber have to do with it?

Undoubtedly this designation dates from the time when Americans were most keenly interested in Italian art and antiquities—at the time when Hawthrone and other American writers introduced to many of their compatriots the romance and charm of old Rome. It was at this time that artists delighted in depicting street scenes in Rome, Roman girls and boys eating grapes, young Roman mothers and their babies—not ancient Rome, of course, but the Rome that any resident or sojourner in Rome might see about him. The square of silk that the peasant women around Rome folded to make into their head covering showed these stripes of bright blues, greens, yellows, etc., and so these colors used in stripes became known as Roman stripes. Then as now Americans suffered from a great vogue for Roman stripes. Women even knitted and crochetted for themselves nice warm under petticoats—for it was in the days when women really did wear woolen under petticoats—of Roman stripes—and they were considered very fashionable.

President Ebert Lauded As Savior Of Germany

Berlin, June 15.—Ludendorff, Hitler, Stresemann, Marx, every one discussing Germany and its politics speaks these names; MacDonald, Poincare, Millerand, Mussolini, Horthy, Trotsky, center European problems about them, and yet the President of the third great republic of the world, its founder, its first President, is neither mentioned nor quoted, is known as name only, Fritz Ebert, a saddler, the son of a Heidelberg tailor.

And even as he is not in the foreground, even as he is not a battle center, just so is he of supreme significance in the present-day history of Germany as he was in the days leading up to the war. This laborer son of a laborer, who fought his way from a saddler's bench to the chief magistracy of a great nation through the meshes of monarchy, war, disaster and revolution, has always been such a figure, fiery and yet not vociferous, a powerful will and mind, but not a publicist; an indefatigable worker of determination and courage, yet all quietly and silently done. That is why this man, who at the age of forty-eight brushed aside a military hierarchy and guided the establishment of a republic, this man whom a nation chose as the first President of its adventure in democracy, and who through revolutions and putsches, rioting and assassination since, has alone of all political leaders of Germany escaped execration and abuse, who alone has the faith and confidence of his countrymen, and who time and time again has prevented disaster and collapse.

ALONE UNMOVABLE

In those terrible months of an evercrashing money and an ever-changing ministry it was Fritz Ebert, President of the German Republic, who alone was the unmovable pivot. It was this silent man, this former labor union organizer who kept in balance the destiny of his country. It was he alone who refused in those terrible months to give way to either Red or White.

Communism clamored and shrieked, demanded the communization of the nation as the only solution to the disaster closing in; militaristic and monarchistic reactionarism threatened and blustered, demanding a dictatorship, an iron government to prevent dissolution. Ebert refused to be swept off his feet. He forced coalition. Nither Left nor Right scored. And all without "Gott und Ich" declamations of the Ludendorff variety, without the waving of flags or the vociferating of "Hymns of Hate," of either nationalistic or communistic order.

And so, today, this man, who was President before the age of fifty, is again fighting grave problems. Faced with a Reichstag minorities, with Right and Left rampant and vitriolic, hating and hated without mercy or reason, prepared to rush to arms and eager for the fray, faced with all this at home and the task of making good to the world the ravages of a war engendered by a military autocracy, Fritz Ebert, without bluster and gesture, is holding the reins with the same firmness and courage.

REVOLT "FROM BELOW"

Fritz Ebert's life is wrapped up from very birth in the history of the Germans as a united nation. He was born in February, 1871, just a few weeks after the "Kaiserproklamation" in Versailles, wherein Bismarck announced the establishment of the German Empire. In this very room in Versailles some fifty years later comrades of Ebert signed a peace treaty which restored to France territories robbed from her in 1871, and which sounded the deathknell of the arrogant monarchies which had committed the outrage. Bismarck, in effecting the German Empire, did a revolutionary act. But it was a safe and sane revolution. It was a revolution "von oben," from above. When Ebert led the creation of a republic that, too, was a revolution. A revolution, however, "von unten," from below. The establishment of the German Republic was the fulfillment of the revolt of 1848, in Germany, which was a movement of democracy. Bismarck, a genius of political foresight, knew that in the heart of the Germans was a demand for a united nation.

The empire flourished, grew wealthy and powerful. Apparently the democratic movement was dead. And yet the ideal was about. Through unionism, social democracy, it grew and spread. In the war it was bled white and yet it won and out of the tragedy of a mighty conflagaration came a German republic, and the dreams of those idealists of 1848 came true.

In those fifty years from the founding of the empire to the establishment of the republic, that half a century which saw the rise and fall of a world power, Fritz Ebert was in the van in the establishment and development of the movement for democracy. He was as a youth of eighteen one of its first organizers and leaders. As a map of forty-eight he was chosen its first President.

BORN IN HEIDELBERG

In old Heidelberg, set in the famous Schwarzwald of Germany, a little city topped by the superb ruins of a Renaissance castle, the home of a six-century-old university renowned for its medical college, steeped in the folklore of the land, its knights and heroes, its emperors and conquerors, in this dreamy old beauty spot of southern Germany, President Ebert was born. He was one of eight children. His father was a Catholic, his mother a Protestant. His father kept a little tailor shop and was an ardent democrat. The state of Wurtemberg, then the Duchy of Wurtemberg, in which Heidelberg is located, has throughout the history of Germany been known as the center of liberalism. It is Wurtemberg that has produced the great German teachers, philosophers, economists and political leaders. It was the home of the democratic movement in 1848. It remains so today.

In this environment, amid those traditions, Ebert grew to youth. At eighteen he became a saddler's apprentice in Bremen. H became active in the creation of a labor union among his fellow workers. His interest spread to the Social-Democratic political movement. Before he was nineteen he was chosen secretary of his organization. In 1891 he led his first strike, organizing the bakers. He won. It was in this conflict that he gave out the watchwords of the German labor and democracy movement, "Brot und Freiheit" ("Bread and liberty").

HONORED IN 1900

In 1894 he was married. There were five children in the family, two sons were killed in the war. In 1900 he was chosen one of the Labor secretaries by the government, to direct the administration of the newly created unemployment, accident and old age pension laws. It was a full measure of recognition, both by his fellow workers and the government, that this self-taught workingman should be selected for this vital task. He remained with this work until 1905 when he resigned to accept the post as leader of the Social-Democratic party. He was then thirty-four years old. In 1912 he was elected to the Reichstag and became the leading figure of the opposition. In July, 1914, it was Ebert who organized huge mass meetings of 100,000 people each throughout Germany protesting against the war. Throughout the war he forged ever to the front as the outstanding political figure. The world knew of other names, but it was Fritz Ebert who clamored ever against the carnage and demanded its cessation.

In the days of the collapse of the German resistance in September, 1918, he was called in by the government. On October 5 he and his colleagues decided to enter the government as members of the Cabinet. On November 3 the sailors at Kiel revolted and announced a Soviet. Ebert was appealed to to save the situation from anarchy. He became embattled on two fronts, with monarchism and anarchism. On November 7 he demanded control of the government, delivering an ultimatum expiring on the 9th. On that day it was found that the royal family had decamped; the now again strutting Ludendorff, declaiming so valiantly that he alone will save his country, put on mufti for the first time in four years (he seemed to have them about) and vanished into Holland. The troops announced themselves for the new government and Ebert was chosen Chancellor.

The months that followed were never ending days of conflict against extremes, maintaining the morale of a starved and beaten people, creating and writing a constitution and the creation of a republic. And through it all Ebert was the unmovable pillar of cooiness, deliberation, moderation. Who else was there to be made leader, but this old veteran in the struggle for democracy, this saddler son of a tailor? On February 11, 1919, he was elected President and in August of that year in the city of Weimar, once known as the Athens of Europe, where lived and wrote Goethe and Schiller, he took the oath of office under the newly-framed constitution of the Republic of Germany.

The years since then have been more grim and terrible than even those before and during the war. Revolution, arson, murder, the rearing head of reactionarism and militarism, financial disaster and economic collapse—these have been the travails of this unhappy land. Chancellors have come and gone in long array, and yet Fritz Ebert stands and labors.

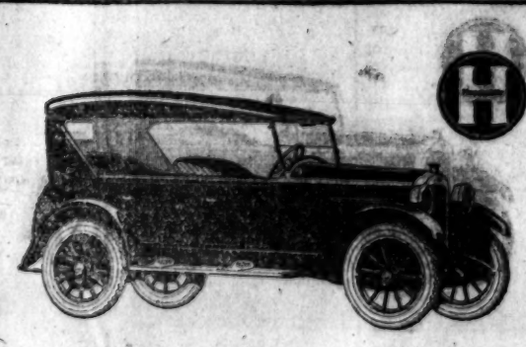
Hupmobile


ONE does not need to be an expert mechanic to own and operate a Hupmobile. It is surprising how few things demand attention. Of course it is necessary to give it the ordinary care that one would give to any valuable possession as well as to attend to such minor details as water, petrol and oil.
The builders of Hupmobile have succeeded since 1908 in making a motor car so simply constructed as to enable the average person with no mechanical skill to drive it with ease, both of mind and body.

Dotted Lines show where Rubber is cultivated
RUBBER PRODUCTS THAT ARE UNIFORMLY GOOD
A little over 15 years ago the United States Rubber Company started their own rubber plantations in Sumatra and the Malay Peninsula. They did this that they might always be certain of securing crude rubber unvarying in quality.
Today the United States Rubber Company owns 172 square miles of rubber plantations and 5,000,000 carefully selected rubber trees under the constant care and supervision of a corps of tree experts.
Recently this company announced two revolutionary advances in the art of rubber manufacture: The New Sprayed Rubber and The New Web Cord.
The first of these ensures your getting rubber articles made from the purest virgin rubber ever produced. A rubber with all its natural properties unimpaired by the addition of smoke residues and chemicals. The second advance means a cord tire of a quality even more consistent than ever before.
United States Rubber products always have been leaders in the rubber industry. Now—due to these two startling discoveries, you can be assured of rubber products that are more than ever uniformly good.

SCHEME FOR REORGANIZING DUNLOP CO., IS COMPLEX

Drastic Measures Proposed For Saving The Great Corporation

SEEMS HOPEFUL

Far Eastern Stockholders Are Interested In London's Plan

Far Eastern stockholders in the Dunlop Rubber Co., Ltd., are watching with much interest the progress of the proposed drastic scheme for capital reorganisation. Financial journals in England and America are giving considerable space to the affairs of this great corporation. The measures proposed emphasize the severity of the ordeal through which the Company has passed.

After paying extraordinarily favorable dividends, the Company late in 1920 had to confess to an extremely difficult position. Losses over forward contracts for the purchase of rubber and cotton were enormous, and this trouble was aggravated by an over-supply of equipment and general extravagance in operation.

DIVIDENDS SUSPENDED

The result was that dividends, even on the preference shares, had to be suspended, and the scheme now proposed is to provide for a net deficiency of assets to the extent of £11,853,667. This was made up of £7,731,739 representing the adverse balance of profit and loss accrued at June 30, 1922; £4,516,787 for depreciation in the value of the Company's holdings and subsidiaries; £241,855 for expenses of new capital issues; and £92,457 to reduce values of land and plant. These items constitute a total of £12,582,838, and after deducting the balance of the reserve fund, amounting to £1,229,171, the deficiency already mentioned is shown.

Usually such a deficiency would fall upon the ordinary shareholders, but the management considers that some concessions should be made by the preference shareholders. The ordinary shareholders are asked to write down their £1 shares to a nominal value of 6s. 8d. per share, which provides a sum of £9,927,543 towards the deficiency.

The whole of the preference shares of all classes are asked to surrender their contingent rights to participate in surplus profits, namely, ½ percent in the case of A and B shares, and 1 percent in the case of C shares. Moreover, the C shares are asked to consent to a reduction of their capital from £3,000,000 to £2,250,000, with the condition that the dividend on such shares shall be 10 percent per annum calculated on the reduced amount, which is equal to 7½ percent on the original nominal capital, but in the event of the winding-up of the Company such shares shall rank in priority to the ordinary shares as having a nominal value of £3,000,000 for the purposes of the return of capital.

By this reduction in the C preference charge, the sum of £15,000 per annum will be saved, and this sum it is intended to apply towards the redemption of debenture stock in addition to the annual provision laid down in the trust deed.

QUESTION OF ARREARS

The question of arrears of dividend on the preference shares will be settled by the allotment of ordinary shares to the amount of £780,000, which will provide a payment equivalent to between 86 and 98 percent of the arrears. The increased capital, it will be noted, approaches very nearly the amount of capital written off of the C preference capital.

If the scheme is carried through on these lines, the Company will have cleared up its liabilities to the present time, and in all probability will really have a considerable reserve in some of its assets. The earning power being already considerable, the directors propose to pay the dividend on the preference shares from January 1 of this year in cash, and it is evident that if profits are maintained, the ordinary shares should have a very good chance of receiving a dividend at no distant date.

Attached to the reorganisation scheme are the results obtained for the eighteen months ending December 31, last. Profits in that period amounted to £1,915,408, and, after deducting interest, the net profit was £11,451,792, or at the rate of about £7,000,000 per annum.

Commercial News

London Is Lending Too Much Money Abroad

(From Our Own Correspondent)

London, July 1.—The London Chamber of Commerce, in its Journal of June 27, gives an interesting review of outstanding financial movements at present, the chief points foints of which are as under:

Not for the first time, the opinion has been expressed that this country is lending too much money abroad. The question requires careful consideration, and, as usual, there is much to be said on both sides. According to statistics compiled by the Midland Bank, the new capital raised in this country in the first five months of this year amounted to £86,893,667, of which little over £26,000,000 was for home purposes, the rest being for account of foreign countries and the British oversea dominions. At first sight it might seem that it would have been to our advantage if a much larger proportion of this total had been raised for the purpose of expenditure in this country. This does not necessarily follow. Most economists agree that as a rule the proceeds of new loans raised here for the benefit of foreign countries, India or the colonies, are spent here in the purchase of materials, etc., thus greatly helping our export trade. In some cases, admittedly, foreign loans should not be encouraged too much. A European municipality, for example, might borrow a million in London and use the whole amount in effecting improvements in its own district without spending a penny of the money in this country. Another example is the case of the Dutch East Indies Government, which raised one or two loans in London, the proceeds of which, it is said, were partly used in developing the rubber industry of the Dutch East Indies. Yet the growers there refuse to come into the Stevenson scheme for restricting the output of rubber in the East, with adverse effects to the industry in Malaya and the Straits, in which so much British capital is interested.

Professor J. M. Keynes is among those who contend that this country would have gained had part of the money which we have lent abroad in the past been invested instead in constructional work at home—in road-building, housing, electrical power development, etc. In regard to this, there is the fact that capital expenditure on road construction, for example, might easily prove to be unremunerative. Further, past experience suggests that an exceptionally heavy expenditure for home purposes would bring about inflation of prices and depreciation of the external value of the currency, thus leading, possibly, to a financial crisis. It is recalled by a writer in the City columns of the Times that during the period of active railway development in this country in the 'forties there was a very heavy investment of capital at home, followed by a considerable rise in prices and a depreciation of the exchange. At first the circumstance mystified the economists of the day, but inquiry showed that, whereas £50,000,000 disbursed in wages by Lancashire manufacturers produced an export of pay for the foodstuffs and raw materials which the wage-earners purchased from abroad, £50,000,000 paid in wages to those engaged on railway construction produced no corresponding export, though the same portion of their wages was spent on imported commodities. It is explained that the exceptional expenditure on railway development had the effect of increasing very much the consumption of all commodities, both of foreign import and home products, and raised prices. The heavy railway investment in the 'forties was accompanied by a large harvest, and as the latter brought about a heavy fall in the price of corn, the two circumstances are regarded as having been responsible for the credit crisis of 1847. In that year there was a panic: the Bank Act was suspended, and the Bank Rate went to 8 percent.

A DEARER MONEY ADVOCATE

At a time when re-discount rates are falling almost throughout the United States, thus opening up at least the possibility of a reduction in due course in our official minimum, it is rather curious to note that one of the leading bankers of this country, Dr. Walter Leaf, advocates an increase in the Bank Rate to 5 percent. This is for the purpose of bringing back the American exchange to parity. The suggestion is contained in the current review of the Westminister Bank. Dr. Leaf says that the rise in the Bank Rate could, if necessary, be accompanied by an increase in the interest allowed by the banks on foreign deposits to, say, 31-2 per cent. The two movements should coincide with an explicit announcement that they expressed a definite policy on the part of this country and that it was our intention to return to a gold basis. He considers that these measures, in conjunction with the fall of the Federal Reserve rate now in progress in America, would bring about parity possibly much sooner than most people are at present willing to expect. Such a policy, in his opinion, should have the support of those who believe in a "managed currency" and stabilized prices, and also of those who believe that we have been overlending to foreign [illegible], as it would evidently make the London market less tempting to oversea borrowers.

A QUESTION OF POLICY

It may be accepted that Dr. Leaf is right in the view he takes of the effect of a 5 percent. Bank Rate in restoring the American exchange to par. But it may be doubted whether the measure would materially reduce the amount of foreign borrowing in London. America is the only other great lending country, and hitherto America has usually stipulated that the proceeds of foreign loans raised there must be spent in the United States. If such stipulations were adhered to, foreign and colonial borrowers might still find Great Britain the better market in which to raise money, even though the interest rate were higher than in New York. As to the Bank Rate, the question of the acceptance of Dr. Leaf's suggestion depends upon what policy the authorities here would adopt. For the last few years they have favored cheap money, partly because if the cost of replacing Treasury Bills as they matured, and partly because it facilitated debt conversion operations. Since the time when the 7 percent. Bank Rate gave way to a more reasonable figure, a very large amount of shortdated debt bearing 5 percent, or a still higher rate of interest, has been converted into long-dated debt bearing a much lower interest rate, and although the necessity of financing the Treasury Bills as cheaply as possible is not so great now as when the total outstanding was twice the present figure, it is doubtful if the Government would reverse their policy, even for the purpose indicated.

A POSSIBLE EFFECT OF PAR

In some important respects it would be to our great advantage if the sterling dollar exchange stood at par. The cost of the instalments on the American debt would be greatly lessened, and the country would have to pay much less for the food, etc., which it is compelled to import from United States. But the quotation of the American exchange at or over par might bring the eternal gold problem into unpleasant prominence. All the indications point to a desire on the part of America to get rid of some of her surplus gold because, in present circumstances, it is virtually useless to her. The country is afraid to use it as Great Britain used gold in the pre-war days because of the probable inflation which would result. It is calculated that the amount of gold which has been sent to the United States since the war is approximately £1,000,000. If she used it as a basis for the creation of extra credit, there would certainly be a great rise in commodity prices in America; in other words, the real value of the gold would seriously depreciate. It is possible that if the authorities here saw a return movement of some of this gold they would take a similar view of the possible effects upon economic conditions in this country. The question would then arise as to how they would face the situation. There is certainly no wish to see a repetition of the inflation suffered three or four years ago. Fortunately, the American debt settlement scheme gave Great Britain the power to pay debt in the form of dollars or gold, and it is possible that if the authorities foresaw a big gold import into this country they would counteract its effect by paying back the gold to America in effecting a reduction of the debt.

Tebong Rubber & Tapioca Estate Meeting

The annual meeting of the Tebong Rubber and Tapioca Estates, Ltd., (in voluntary liquidation) was held yesterday morning at the offices of Messrs. J. A. Wattie & Co., Ltd. The meeting was presided over by Mr. G. Grayrigge, acting as attorney for Mr. A. J. Welch, liquidator. The chairman's speech was as follows:

Gentlemen, as attorney for Mr. Welch who is at present absent from Shanghai, I have called this meeting to comply with the Hongkong Ordinances which make it necessary for the liquidator to summon a general meeting of the company at the end of the first year from the commencement of the winding up and of each succeeding year to lay before the meeting an account of his acts and dealings and of the conduct of the winding up during the preceding year.

You are already aware that as per agreement, the liabilities of the old company have been defrayed by the new company, that the assets were also taken over by the new company, and that no actual property came into the possession of the liquidator, therefore there are no accounts to be submitted.

There are at present a number of certificates of the old company which have not yet been presented for exchange for shares of the new company.

As the liquidation cannot be longer delayed through this cause, the new shares unclaimed will have to be transferred to the name of a trustee, but I trust that those shareholders who have not exchanged their scrip will do so immediately.

It is the hope of the liquidator to complete the liquidation by the end of this year, when another meeting will be called in accordance with Section 188 of the Companies Ordinances.

This is all I have to say, gentlemen, I thank you for your attendance.

ABOUT YOUR DAUGHTER.
Points Parents Should Remember.

In their early teens it is common for girls to outgrow their strength, and when the strength is sapped by too rapid growth, anaemia often develops. The first signs may be noticed by peevishness, languor, headaches, and perhaps a craving for sweets, or even starch.

Neglected anaemia leads to decline, but if you see that your daughter's blood is enriched, there need be no cause for anxiety. The finest blood enricher ever discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The pure red blood created by these Pills will quickly banish all signs of anaemia.

Read what Miss P. M. Edwardes, of 45 Union Place, Colombo, says: —"About three years ago I suffered greatly with anaemia. I was listless and could not sleep or eat properly. The poor state of my health caused my parents considerable anxiety.

"On the urging of my mother I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Almost from the first I noticed an improvement in my health. Presently I could eat and sleep better; vitality returned and I felt a renewed interest in things. I was seventeen then and I think that the taking of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills altered the course of my life. I owe my cure to them."

The pure, rich, red blood made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is a wonderful asset, not to girls alone but to grown-up men and women also, for it revitalizes debilitated nerves, remedies weak digestion, drives out rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, rebuilds the whole system after malaria, typhoid or other weakening illness. Of dealers, or post free, $1.50 per bottle, $8 for 6 bottles, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 60 Kiangee Road, Shanghai.

The Unheeded Lesson Of The Floods

CHINA is again the victim of serious floods due to excessive rainfall, and as a result practically all of the rivers north of the Yangtsze are out of their banks and once more thousands of helpless people are made homeless and objects of public charity. Reports in the newspapers tell of the havoc wrought in destruction of houses, farm crops and animals and human lives. Soon there will be drives for funds to provide food and shelter for the needy and this appeal will come to foreigners as well as Chinese. Already we have the news of the Peking cabinet's action in asking for a Customs surtax of 5% for famine relief.

In 1921-22 the appeal for funds went beyond the boundaries of China to foreign lands, and in America alone a sum of approximately G. $8,000,000 was raised. Other sums were raised in Britain and elsewhere, and as a result thousands of Chinese were saved from starvation in refugee camps and upon road construction projects in various parts of North China. It is too early to estimate the results of the present disaster, but that China will again require help in meeting the problem of relief goes without saying.

To those ultra-patriotic elements in the Chinese population who are fond of parading the superiority of China's ancient civilisation over that of the West, we reply in no vindictive spirit to China's complete failure to meet this problem of floods in Central and North China. The Chinese people—farmers of forty centuries—have occupied the river valleys of Eastern Asia since the days of mythology and at regular intervals, most disheartening in their frequency, they have watched their rivers overflow their banks and inundate the countryside. The old fatalistic attitude was to view the floods, on the one hand, as an indication of displeasure on the part of the gods at the oppressions of unpopular human rulers, and, on the other hand, to view them as an act of providence to keep down the population.

In the modern days of the Republic, official China does not lay the floods to the angry gods nor to a divine method of keeping human fecundity in check. China has now reached the investigation stage in her development, and among the myriads of suggestions for uses of the remitted Boxer Indemnities, we would like to suggest another—that a large sum be laid aside to construct a library for housing the thousands of engineering reports which have been made in recent years on the subject of flood control and reclamation. The effect of these ever-recurring floods has been profound in China. It is shown in the ancient literature of the country, and to this ancient literature we now add the modern literature of the highly paid reclamation engineer—more technical in its content, but equally futile from the standpoint of bringing relief to a sorely distressed people.

According to a writer in the Far Eastern Times of Peking, the first foreign investigation of the flood problem in China was made by a British Consul fifty years ago who drew attention to the final stages of deforestation that the west of Chihli Province, the Province of Shansi and the whole upper valley of the Yellow River were undergoing at the hands of an ignorant population, and he emphasised the necessity for prompt remedial action, both local and general, so as to mitigate the disasters due to the ravages of the Yellow River and the provincial rivers of Chihli when in flood. Since that early report, there have been others, until the volume of printed literature on the subject could itself be used to build a dam.

But China does nothing and the reports accomplish nothing except to give temporary jobs to high-priced foreign experts and returned students and to the job printers who publish the avalanche of literature. Take the Hwai Valley reclamation, for instance, since it is nearer home in that it embraces parts of the Provinces of Kiangsu, Anhwei and Honan. This great district, which is periodically inundated by a river which, through forces of nature, has been deprived of its mouth, has been investigated and reinvestigated. The Y. M. C. A. investigated it; The Red Cross investigated it; Mr. John R. Freeman, a prominent American engineer, has investigated it; the Chinese have investigated it and recently an august military governor had himself appointed "Tupan of the Hwai." But in spite of it all, the Hwai is still a swamp and the Chinese farmer holds his plow handle with an eye cocked on the nearest embankment to which he knows he must flee when the spring and summer rains begin.

In the West with its "civilisation, against which the student patriots are now so energetically warning their countrymen, the flooding river has been conquered. In India, in Egypt, in Europe and in America the over flowing rivers have been tamed and flooded lands have been reclaimed. Flood waters are impounded in great reservoirs and led into drainage canals to bring vegetable life and prosperity to regions not favored by sufficient rainfall. And, in addition to this, water-power has been developed for industrial establishments. The American Government in the last half century has advanced money to dozens of these reclamation schemes and only two or three have turned out unprofitable—almost always the loans have come back from the reclaimed areas.

But out here in China, the Government does practically nothing except to authorise investigations, ask for Customs surtaxes, issue reports and then sit back and wait for the next flood.

Is Dr. Sun Yat-sen Misjudged ?

A Doughty champion of Dr. Sun Yat-sen takes up the cudgels for the stormy petrel of South China in the letter published today in which the writer makes some crushing remarks in connection with our recent editorial article entitled "Garibaldi and Dr. Sun." One of the statements in our editorial to which our correspondent takes exception is the passage in which we alluded to Dr. Sun as presenting a spectacle of abject impotence. We fail to understand why our correspondent should distort justifiable criticism of Dr. Sun and his regime into a semblance of being the effusions of "scurrilous scribblers." All the world knows that the so-called Canton Government presents a sorry spectacle of helplessness, as attested by Dr. Sun himself when he recently declared that he would no longer be responsible for the maintenance of the mercenaries in the province of Kwangtung and invited this rabble soldiery of South China to raise funds from the populace as best they could. Could there be any more damaging admission of impotence than this? And so far as scurrility is concerned, there is nothing that the foreign Press of the Far East can teach those who stand close to Dr. Sun, as witness the characteristic ejaculation of the latter's secretary that Dr. Sun did not feel called upon "to prove to enemies and fools that he was alive" by displaying himself to them.

Our correspondent, in his letter today, suggests, if not in so many words, at least by implication, that a time may come when Dr. Sun may be accounted as great as Garibaldi and other figures which grace the pages of history, including George Washington, Garibaldi, as our correspondent admits, was a great man and a brave general of Italy. No reasonable man endowed with capacity for clear thinking can seriously suggest that the majority of the people of China or the peoples of foreign countries regard Dr. Sun as a great man; whether history will account him great is a point that need not be labored. Garibaldi was a brave general of Italy, but has Dr. Sun at any time shown any of the qualifications making for good generalship or displayed any signal bravery? Not long ago, he fled from his political stronghold aboard a British gunboat when beset by danger, and by way of requiting the generosity of the British authorities in saving his life, he connives at the anti-British feeling prevailing in Canton, as exemplified in the vociferous campaign for the recall of the British Consul-General, Sir James Jamieson, for daring to stigmatize Mr. Chu Chao-hsin's fairy tales about China before a London assembly as rank nonsense. We in this part of the world have not forgotten the Canton politicians' share in the seamen's strike movement in Hongkong and we also cannot shut our eyes to the fact that nothing is being done by the Chinese authorities to put a period to the senseless strike in the Shameen area, the sole excuse for which is that certain necessary regulations have been introduced for the control of Chinese because the foreign community of Canton do not want to be butchered in cold blood as were the unfortunate victims who attended the fatal banquet given in honor of the Governor-General of Indo-China.

To return to our correspondent. Cavour, he says, eager as he was for the regeneration and deliverance of Italy, steered clear of the revolutionary fanaticism which characterised the methods of of the Carbonari and "Young Italy." Has Dr. Sun tried to steer clear of the revolutionary fanaticism which has discredited an otherwise good cause? He has surrounded himself with a retinue of self-seekers and political charlatans who are looked upon with richly merited suspicion. These men have engaged in the business of revolution not because they are consumed by a burning zeal to hold aloft the torchlight of civilisation but for what they can get out of it. Consequently the perpetuation of turmoil and disorder in this country accrues to their personal profit. Once unification has been secured, there will be nothing more left to wrangle about and their main source of revenue will have vanished. That is the real reason why unification has come to be regarded as impossible. There is no real quarrel between the people of one province with the people of another province. The quarrel, which is an artificial one—since there is no vital principle at stake—is between the politicians and militarists of one region with those of another, and these sinister individuals are a greater menace to the toiling masses of China than any external foe can ever be.

Our correspondent talks glibly of the "growing appreciation on the part of Dr. Sun's countrymen of his irreproachable character, his pure patriotism, his sublime fortitude, his fearless bravery, his unwavering faith in republicanism," and what not. It is a fine piece of word-painting to which our correspondent resorts, but in the interest of historical accuracy, we are compelled to say that he is indulging in sheer nonsense. Dr. Sun's character may be irreproachable so far as he himself is concerned, but we fear his satellites are not as incorruptible as he is, and association with them has brought discredit and ignominy on himself; the most effective answer to our critic when he talks of Dr. Sun's pure patriotism is that even as we write these lines, a message comes from Colombo to the effect that a foreign vessel has proceeded with a cargo of two machine-guns and a lage number of rifles and sixty tons of ammunition, all of German manufacture, consigned to Canton. If the business of killing can be called "pure patriotism," then all we can say is: God save the people of China from such patriotism. We shall be charitable and say no more about the "fearless bravery" of Dr. Sun, but we cannot refrain from asking our correspondent what he means by Dr. Sun's "unwavering faith in republicanism" Is it this glorious faith that inspires Dr. Sun and his supporters to despoil the populace of Kwangtung in order to swell their war-chest? How many people in the province of Kwangtung would contemplate Dr. Sun's departure with sorrow If a referendum were to be taken, it would a tale unfold. We do not wish to misjudge Dr. Sun. We only appraise his worth by actual results. By their fruits ye shall know them.

The Olympic Games Episode

IN view of the extensive and worldwide efforts to bring about an increase in international comity and good will, it seems a bit premature for such a conservative journal as the London Times to suggest that the death knell of the Olympic Games has been sounded as the result of certain unsportsmanlike reactions to some of the decisions at the Paris contests.

The despatch carried by Reuter's yesterday with reference to "the unsportsmanlike and sometimes disgraceful" scenes in connection with the games at Paris doubtless caused a feeling of deepest disappointment and chagrin to Frenchmen here and elsewhere in the world; but it is safe to say that nowhere did these occurrences cause deeper regret than in the hearts of the vast majority of the people of France, who, when the situation is closely analysed, are the real victims. The Reuter telegram stated that the Americans were the chief sufferers, but that is not true. The American and other athletes who may have been given the worst of it in certain rulings of the judges and referees were victims in a superficial sense only; the real misfortune falls on the great mass of French people who are compelled to stand by helpless while a handful of their compatriots bring down odium and imprecations upon themselves and their country, all because they have not yet learned that the best part of sportsmanship is the ability to lose gracefully.

The Americans, in a very great sense, created, all unconsciously, the backgrcund from which these unfortunate incidents arose, and for that very reason they will be first to condone the misbehaviour of the few misguided individuals who have been responsible for the trouble at Paris.

Why, many Americans will ask, are we responsible?

We are responsible for the reason that, during the war, we had some two million athletes in France who spent considerable time in an enthusiastic effort to assist the Allies in a successful prosecution of the war, and considerable more time in an equally enthusiastic effort to inculcate the American athletic idea in the minds of their French hosts, and if they were successful in the first enterprise they were even more successful in the second, as attested by the fact that the France of today, in vivid contrast to the pre-war France, is loco on the subject of athletics, and particularly on the subject of athletics as exemplified by Americans.

The result was inevitable: the French crowd—meaning any cross section of the French people that might be found in the grandstand at an athletic meeting in France—became inculcated with the typical American desire to win before the French athletes acquired the necessary training and ability to accomplish that commendable result.

The French are very similar to the Americans in that both peoples are characterised by intensity of feeling. A Frenchman or an American will boil over before the man of another race, say a Briton, has started to simmer. Witness the daily hysterics in thousands of American baseball enclosures. Witness, now, the similar hysterics in the Paris stadium when the hated (figuratively speaking) invader noses out the home team in a desperate ninth inning finish.

The staid old London Times would not speak of "death knells" if it had ever sipped at the spring from which this volcanic enthusiasm flows. The Times is accustomed to a placid contemplation of a placid cricket match, with its tea interval and its repressed applause, and wots not of the sweating athlete who hits the dirt in a frantic slide and an instant later glares with murder in his heart at the umpire who waved him out.

It is safe to say that not a single one of the French athletes was guilty of unsportsmanlike conduct on the field. It is also safe to say that the vast majority of the French spectators, while sorry their men could not win, were nevertheless ready to accord the winners a just meed of praise.

And it is equally safe to say that the whole trouble at Paris has been caused by a comparatively small number of as yet undisciplined spectators, and undisciplined judges and referees who allowed themselves to be influenced by this noisy minority.

EXCERPTS FROM GREAT WRITERS

By Mathy

PAY, PAY, PAY!

Whatever you get you pay for, one way or another.

The cheapest plan is to pay cash.

There is a sort of satisfaction in giving money down for anything. Then you feel the matter is settled. No mortgage on your future happiness "heavy, heavy, hangs over your head."

Think over all the things you ever got for nothing. You've paid for them every one; paid perhaps in fowered self-respect, restricted liberty, and embarrassing sense of obligation—something that has cost you more than if you had handed over the price at once.

Stolen waters are sweet. The trouble is, nobody ever got away with them. Every ounce of sweetness made a pound of nausea.

Self-indulgence tastes good. But remember the price—self-loathing.

Pride is a comfortable sensation. But its price is a fall, which is not comfortable.

When you do what you know is shady, in order to gain money or other advantage, you get your desire maybe, but it is prostitute's pay. You've sold youself, and that always a fool's bargain.

Nature keeps books pitilessly. Your credit with her is good, but she collects; there is no land you can flee to and escape her bailiffs.

You can cheat Nature, abuse her, lie to her, overreach her, she is very complaisant; you may do your will with her, but she never forgets; she sees to it that you pay her every cent you owe, with interest.

Every day her bloodhounds track down the men and women who owe her. The newspapers are full of their shrieks of pain, their gestures of horror.

Every generation a new crop of fools comes on. They think they can beat the orderly universe. They conceive themselves to be more clever than the eternal laws. They snatch goods from Nature's store and run. They enjoy the booty, laugh, and cackle at their skill.

And one by one they all come back to Nature's counter and pay—pay in tears, in agony, in despair; the fools before them have paid.

There is a perpetual, persistent ignorance, as eternal as wisdom.

So, enjoy yourself, youth; eat, drink, and be merry, and let your soul delight itself in fatness and wine, pluck the bloom of beauty, and gather the fruits of laughter; but count the cost, beware of the insidious credit system, and pay cash.

At least then you'll know what it costs.

"GARIBALDI AND DR. SUN"

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir:—While a perusal of the biography of Giuseppe Garibaldi, of which a portion you have embodied in your editorial of July 19, 1924, for the obvious purpose of belittling the importance of Dr. Sun Yat-sen serves to strengthen my conviction that Giuseppe Garibaldi was a great man and a brave general of Italy, it wakens my imagination to conjure up the name of Camillo Benso di Cavour, with which that of Garibaldi is inseparately associated.

Cavour, the regenerator of Italy, and one of the greatest modern statesmen, was a man of intellectual power, strong will, and practical wisdom. He travelled much, and, as a result, became well acquainted with the institutions of self-governing countries, the trend of public opinion in Europe, and the tendency of the European politics to democracy. Eager as he was for the deliverance of Italy, he steered clear of the revolutionary fanaticism which characterised the methods of the Carbonari and "Young Italy". Convinced of the fact that the best course in politics was a watchful inactivity, for sixteen years he was obliged to wait in private life, a keen and patient observer, acquiring that ripe and comprehensive wisdom which should fit him to be an effective servant of his country. From 1850 to his death in 1861, he, by a dexterous manipulation of diplomacy and employment of foreign help, applied himself to the accomplishment of the great work which, when consummated by Victor Emmanuel and Garibaldi, raised Italy from a mere "geographic expression" to a rank among the great powers of Europe.

In citing these historical facts, I have no other purpose in contemplation than to show, by contrast, the various insurmountable difficulties standing in Dr. Sun's way. Aided by no collaborator, encouraged by no foreign assistance, he, in the execution of his noble work of salvation of China, has, as luck would have it, encountered, on the one hand, the wholehearted opposition of Chinese reactionaries and, on the other hand, the bitter enmity of certain capitalistic countries. If Dr. Sun really stands as a spectacle of abject impotence and if the Canton Government is at present not what Bertrand Russel asserted to be—a government of a different type which deserves the support of all progressive people and for which it is possible to have some respect—freedom-loving Americans should be the first to sympathise and to condemn the indifference with which the world regards Dr. Sun's struggles for the cause of democracy.

May I have your permission to inquire why you, when comparing Dr. Sun with Garibaldi, omitted his various activities during his exile which reached, as it were, a climax in 1911 when the Republic of China was founded upon the ruins of a hoary monarchy of forty centuries? Assumed forgetfulness or affected ignorance may be your best reason. Notwithstanding, you, as a writer, have done Dr. Sun a great injustice and, as a journalist, failed in your duty by wilfully withholding from the reading public information of absorbing interest.

It is predicted with a degree of assurance that your sarcastic remark—had Dr. Sun been content to remain a simple medical man he and his country would have been much better—will fall flat, because the political operation of that "simple medical man" whereby China, afflicted with many infirmities of absolutism, is rejuvenated with the transplanted glands of democracy, cannot but excite the admiration of humanity. He is still living; it is premature to call him Nero, Washington, Robespierre, or Garibaldi. Considering the growing appreciation on the part of his countrymen of his irreproachable character, his pure patriotism, his sublime fortitude, his fearless bravery, his unwavering faith in republicanism, I am inclined to believe that his future is not as gloomy as the pessimist assumes. Granting that internal and external jealousies succeed in preventing him from super-adding the glory of national reconstruction to his successes already achieved, we shall, at the least, see the day in the next one or two decades when his name will be pronounced with affectionate gratitude by every Chinese, unless we, in the intervening period, go to heaven for adherence to truth and justice or the other way for bearing false witness.

The habitual indulgence of untimely abuse and sarcasm and the preservation of taciturnity form a marked contrast between foreign and Chinese writers. Assured of the wisdom of the apothegm—(蓋棺論定) a man's character can be [illegible] after his death—no eminent Chinese man of letters but surrilous scribblers ventures to estimate the worth of a living personage by his accidental failure or his transient success, in view of the vicissitudes of human life and mutability of events. Nowhere is the folly of prematurely making splenetic remarks against any great man more clearly discernible than in the detractions cast upon George Washington when he was President. Then he was greatly abused by his political opponents "in terms so exaggerated and indecent as could scarcely be applied to a Nero, a notorious defaulter, or even to a common pickpocket"; now his name is pronounced with awe and veneration and his memory is perpetuated by a "marble column; sublime in its simple grandeur, and fitly intended to reach a loftier height than any similar structure on the face of the whole earth", overlooking the Capital and commanding a magnificent view of the city of Washington.

Being of different nationality, you, in attacking Dr. Sun and his Government, will never give rise to the suspicion that you owe him political animosity; but, by constantly delivering violent tirades against China and her statesmen without offering constructive criticisms, you have earned a place among the early English writers on America whom Washington Irving honored with many a fitting name.

Excuse me for trespassing on the space of your valuable paper.

I am, etc.,

The Spectator

The Two Classes

It seems to be a well used practice for writing and orating folk to divide the world of men into two classes. There are all sorts of ways in which mankind is thus bisected.

The trick has an allurement because it makes you anticipate that someone is about to think clearly, which hope, however, is usually frustrated.

But that people can be divided according to sex, that is, into men and women, no one can deny, for Nature has attended to that for us.

She also divides girls into blondes and brunettes and men into fat and lean.

Minds likewise may be divided into the wise and the foolish, stations in life into rich and poor, and moral conditions into straight and crooked.

Theologians come along and divide us into saints and sinners, orthodox and heretic, churchmen and outsiders, and they even declare that, in the next world, we will be separated into the two abodes, Heaven and Hell.

But it seems to me that a more searching division would be made among men if we would divide those who are pleased when they get praise which they do not deserve from those who are ashamed at praise which they do not deserve.

The line of cleavage here indicated seems to be about the cleanest cut between real honest people on the one hand and the humbug on the other.

This line indicates the difference between the gentleman and the bounder.

It also divides those people whom we call well bred from the cheap and nasty souls who are ill bred; although, truth to say, the quality of good breeding does not always depend upon one's parentage or training but seems mysteriously to be born in a person.

This same line of cleavage would run between those who work in order to get pay and those who work for the joy of doing their work well.

It would divide all those we like or call our kind of folks from the other kind; for, of course, our kind are genuine and the other kind are shoddy.

It would divide those who are charming from those who are always trying to charm.

It would divide whose who are honest because it pleases them from those who are good outside; would divde those who are great from those who are merely called great or occupy some great position.

What The Chinese Papers Are Saying

Peking, July 22.—Government bond speculators are spreading the rumor that Wu Pei-fu plans to deal with the stragglers of Chwang Tse-ping and Yang Hua-chao in Chekiang by armed force. An order will be issued, the reports say, instructing the provinces of Anhui, Kiangsi, Fukien and Chekiang to round them up and disband them. It is further reported that since the territory concerns the jurisdiction of Chi Hsieh-yuan of Kiangsu, the latter would resent interference from Loyang, and would initiate the move himself.—Shun Pao.

Peking, July 22.—The Russian delegation has given out the information that according to instructions from Moscow, no official conference will begin until after the return of the Russian Legation to the Soviet Government. China's proposal to hold an official opening shortly and to hold business sessions in the fall is considered unnecessary, since Moscow agrees to open the formal session immediately after the handing over of the legation.—Shun Pao.

Peking, July 22.—Parliamentarians were entertained by Minister of Finance Wang Keh-ming at his home last night. The host made three offers if the solons would endorse the appointment of Dr. W. W. Yen as premier. He would release one month's salary for them at the time of the election. He would pay them another half month's salary after his election. He would increase the subsidies for the various political factions by ten percent. Over 200 guests expressed satisfaction with the arrangement.—Shanghai Tribune.

Peking, July 22.—In a telegram to Peking, Dr. Alfred Sze, the Chinese Minister to Washington, asks that a portion of the proceeds of the sale of the German bonds be set aside to redeem the tobacco and wine loan made by the Chicago Banks.—Shanghai Tribune.

Peking, July 22.—Dr. W. W. Yen has decided to appoint Dr. Y. S. Tsao, president of Tsing Hua College, chief secretary of the Cabinet. The dean of the college will act as president when Dr. Tsao vacates his position.—Shanghai Tribune.

Peking, July 22.—The Chinese Commission on Sino-Russian Affairs held its first meeting today. The questions of the Chinese Eastern Railway and the retrocession of Outer Mongolia were discussed. Committees were appointed to study further into the questions before their introduction at the formal sessions.—Eastern Times.

Peking, July 22.—Marshal Wu Pei-fu has again telegraphed to Peking, advocating the use of the returned Boxer Indemnity for the construction of railways and urging that the various ministries be ordered to make an early decision on the matter. The message also recommended the appointment of Ex-Premier Chin Yung-peng and Generals Chang Ching-hui and Wang Hui-ching as directors of the Chinese Eastern Railway.—Eastern Times.

Canton, July 22.—Members of the Kuomingtang Party have called a conference of the General Executive Committee of August 10 in this city. The charges brought against the Bolsheviki and the plan to have better co-operation between the new and old members of the party are among the topics to be discussed.—Eastern Times.

Canton, Jply 22.—The various labor organisations are patiently waiting for the reply from the British Consul-General on the question of the Shameen strike. If the reply refuses to make concessions, they have decided to make the strike more general.—Republican Daily News.

Mukden, July 22.—The Commissariat of the Headquarters of Marshal Chang Tso-lin announces that the military expenses of the three Eastern Provinces for 1923 amounted to $15,725,270.—Republican Daily News.

San Francisco, July 20.—All the Chinese students, merchants, men and women, who are passengers on the President Lincoln which arrived here yesterday, have been ordered by immigration authorities to return to China under the restrictions of the new exclusion law.—Republican Daily News.

Peking, July 22.—Dr. J. G. Schurman, the American Minister, will sail on the President Jackson for the United States next month, and will return to China next year. During his absence, Counsellor Edward Bell, will be in charge.—Sin Wan Pao.

Peking, July 22.—On the question of the cigarette taxes, the British-American Tobacco Company is now dealing directly with the Bureau of Tobacco and Wines. It is proposed to increase the general surtax and abolish the miscellaneous levies. At the same time, the company is approaching the various provinces directly without going through the regular diplomatic channels.—Sin Wan Pao.

Harbin, July 22.—Mukden's terms of peace with Chihli as telegraphed to Peking are as follows:

1. Mukden shall have control of the military affairs in the three Eastern Provinces and Mongolia.
2. All industrial, educational, judicial and diplomatic officials in Manchuria and Mongolia shall be appointed by Chang Tso-lin and shall not be subject to the orders of the Central Government.
3. No government bureaus or public organisations shall be subject to the orders of the Central Government.
4. Mukden is free to alter or expand the system of education, industry, finance, police, diplomacy, judiciary and warfare in Manchuria and Mongolia without reference to the Central Government.
5. Mukden shall administer all government revenues collected in Kirin and Heilungkiang.
6. Mukden shall be responsible for the maintenance of all bureaus in the three Eastern Provinces.
7. The three Eastern Provinces shall be empowered to conclude treaties with other nations, in accordance with provisions of the Provincial Constitution.
8. Citizens' Convention may be called from time to time.—Sin Wan Pao.

WILL WED HEIR TO BRITISH EARLDOM

MISS BARBARA MURRAY

The engagement has been announced in London of Miss Barbara Murray, of New York, to Lord Doune, heir to the Scottish Earl of Moray, a descendant of the Scotch Kings. The Earl is immensely wealthy. Lord Doune, now 32, was Captain in the Scottish Horse when the World War began. To get to the front more quickly he transferred to the Royal Flying Corps and in 1916 won the Military Cross for shooting down a German airplane. Later he was severely wounded in a crash. Miss Murray is the daughter of a New York City corporation attorney.

Alfred Sze Turns Down Geneva Job

(Dah Tong News Bureau)

Peking, July 23.—Dr. Alfred Sze has declined to be China's delegate to the International Anti-Opium Conference at Geneva on the ground that he is indisposed.

In deference to the request of General Yen Chi-tang, who has recruited over 500 men in Shantung, the Ministry of War has asked the Ministry of Communications to prepare for the necessary transportation facilities along the Tsingpu and Lunghai railways and has written to the authorities in Kiangsu and Honan to give the men safe conduct.

Lu Yang-li, the retiring Customs Superintendent at Sinti, has handed over his office to Shen Tse-liang. Since he was a former protege of Chin Yin-peng, the ex-premier has requested the Ministry of Finance to give him a suitable position. Minister Wang Keh-ming has consented to do so.

New Bank Planned For Chengchow

(Dah Tong News Bureau)

Hankow, July 23.—A branch of the Hsin Nieh Bank, floated by Wu Pei-fu and Kao En-hung, is being planned for Chengchow. Hsia Kwan-yu, the promoter, expects to be appointed manager of the branch.

On account of the flood, the traffic along the Wuchang-Changsha R.R. has been suspended. Passengers bound for Hunan are waiting transportation in the former Russian Concession, while the hotels are crowded to the limit.
